

MUTUAL EXPECTATIONS

Collaborative Stakeholder Meeting #3: Developing a Kentucky Action Plan for Energy Efficiency

July 31, 2012

- We will commit ourselves to do the work that is needed:
 - ❖ To learn, to discuss, to listen, to research and to help choose actions that will benefit the entire Commonwealth – not just our own interest.
 - ❖ To dedicate the time needed, today and in the months to come, to examine options, research ideas and participate in the full stakeholder process.
- We will attend all sessions and be engaged. We will turn off cell phones and pads and focus on the present.
- We will respect each other as individuals. If we disagree, we will do so with respect and courtesy.
- We will explore before we criticize.
- We will seek to build possibilities rather than tear down. When we do criticize, we will do so constructively, by offering an alternative.
- We will listen wholly, and will reserve our response until we have heard the entire comments of others. Our response will be to what we have heard, not what we expected to hear.
- Our discussions will be creative, specific and on point. We will speak to the interests and issues affecting the state.
- We will focus on finding actions and solutions.
- We recognize that the actions we identify may be applicable to us, and to our organizations, and are not just instructions to state agencies. We recognize that we each have an interest in managing our energy resources wisely and efficiently.
